COLLIERY DISASTER.

Over One Hundred Miners Killed by an Explosion of Gas in a Coal Pit.

LONDON, July 4.—Great excitement has been caused in Barnhill, Yorkshire, by an explosion that occurred in Ingham's colliery. About one hundred and fifty miners were entombed, and most of them perished. Soon after the disaster rescuing parties went to work, and four bodies were recovered and brought to the surface. The pit is badly blocked with fallen rock, dirt and timber, and the progress of the rescuing parties was, therefore, slow. Many of the men who escaped death by the explosion of fire damp were suffocated by choke damp. The usual scenes at the pit mouth in the cases of explosions in mines are being enacted at Barnhill.

The day shift went to work as usual early this morning. The ventilation was reported to be good. At about half past noon, when the workers at the pit mouth were starting to descend, a small explosion occurred, and a cloud of dense smoke rolled up the main shaft. They tried to communicate with the working, but found that the interior had been cut off from the shaft. The pit managers organized an exploring party and descended slowly through the smoke. They were driven back repeatedly, and eventually gave up their purpose of penetrating to the working before the foul air should be cleared away. After taking up the bodies found at the bottom of the shaft the rescue party waited for several hours before making another descent. About the middle of the evening they went down again. The gas had cleared off near the shaft and they were able to examine part of the working. The bodies of the miners lay in heaps. Many were sent to the surface. About one hundred and ten are supposed to have been killed. Some are thought to be yet alive.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock so much gas accumulated in the mine that it was necessary to stop the work of rescue. The men and boys missing number 145. The dead body of the undermanager, badly burned, was found in the mine near the shaft.

DISORDERS IN PARIS.

Students of the Latin Quarter Commit Many Acts of Violence.

PARIS, July 4.—Riotous demonstrations were made by students to-day. The police were unable to disperse the mob. Eventually a large detachment of cavalry charged and scattered the students.

The disorder in the streets increases hourly. The whole district bounded by the Boulevard St. Germain, the river and the Rue de Seine is in an uproar. Students, with crowds of roughs, fill the open spaces. Omnibuses and train cars are stopped by the mob, the passengers are turned out and the vehicles are upset. On the Boulevard St. Germain, Quai Voltaire and the Rue St. Petrus traffic has been suspended. The Rue St. Petrus has been barricaded. Pedestrians are stopped and maltreated. The Charity Hospital has been surrounded with caustic remarks to keep off the students, who threatened to attack the building. The Ministry of Public Works, the Ministry of Education, and the Ecole des Beaux Arts are guarded by military. Skirmishing is reported intermittently from the Rue Jacob, the Voltaire Quai and the Place de la Concorde. The students are trying also to repeat the scenes of last night in the neighborhood of the Palais de Justice and Prefecture de Police. A mob assembled at the Place St. Michel and tried to rush over the bridge to the Boulevard du Palais, which runs between the two buildings. They were met and driven back by a body of cavalry. They retreated, fighting down the Boulevard St. Michel. Many students were trampled on. ## LIVELY FIGHT AT CHICAGO.

Forty-One Persons Accidentally Injured, Three Fatally, and Two Murders.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Aside from the celebration of the world's fair grounds this was the liveliest Fourth of July Chicago has had in recent years. Forty-one people were injured by powder, and three of them, Andrew Burns, William Kattell, thirteen years old, and Dennis May, an electrician, were fatally injured. Burns was hit by a stray shot from a Kattell who was standing near a two-pound can of powder when a spark fell into it, and it exploded, blowing him away with a mallet. Both of his eyes were blown out. The fire department has been on the jump all day, there having been 115 alarms up to 11:30 o'clock to-night. The aggregate loss will amount to $200,000.

In addition to the casualties incident to the character of the day, there were two murders. Mrs. Philomena Finkbeiner being stabbed by her drunken son-in-law, Joseph Irvin, and Albert Lyons being shot through the head by Albert Green. Mrs. Finkbeiner was killed during a family quarrel, and Lyons was murdered while trying to stop Green, who was running from a policeman.

The morning newspapers give many instances of the perfect vandalism manifested by the students' mobs. On the Boulevard St. Michel the rioters caused a block of tram cars. They compelled the passengers in the first car to alight, smashed the windows and window frames with iron bars, unhitched the horses, and then turned the car upside down. The rioters near by were called to assist in this work. The Rue Eugene de La Croix twenty lads built a barricade of vehicles and paving stones. This barricade, like most of the others, impeded greatly the operations of the cavalry, and was impregnable against the police. The Paris newspaper reported that one policeman was killed and thirty or forty policemen and seventeen rioters were injured.

The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News says that the rioters who are aiding the riotous students are supposed to be in this way political agitators, and wish to bring the Deputy government into discredit.

THE REICHSTAG OPENED.

Kaiser Wilhelm Tells the Members He Expects the Army Bill to Be Passed.

BERLIN, July 4.—The Reichstag was opened to-day by Emperor William in person. At noon the castle guards entered the white salon, which occupies the southeastern corner of the royal palace, and took position about the dais from which his Majesty was to read his speech. Following the guards came the members of the Bundesrath, the representatives of the individual states composing the German Empire. After them came the ministers of state and the members of the Reichstag. When all had taken the positions assigned to them the Prince of Pless, grand marshal of the court, announced the approach of the Emperor by knocking upon the floor with his staff of office. The Emperor, attired in full military uniform, entered the salon and proceeded directly to the dais, which was erected to the right of the press gallery. Bowing low, Chancellor Von Caprivi handed the manuscript of the imperial speech to the Emperor. Holding himself erect, his Majesty, in a firm, clear voice, read as follows:

Honored Gentlemen—Since you have been called to convene to-day for the federal government, I desire to welcome you upon entering upon your deliberations. A bill concerning the peace footing of the army, which was submitted to the former Reichstag, to my regret did not find approval. It was the unanimous conviction, however, that my duty as emperor and father of my people required me to consider the bill in order to establish an effective defense of the fatherland.

"You will receive immediately a new bill regarding the peace footing of the army in which there will be taken into account, as far as possible, certain desires expressed during the discussion of the late bill. Consequently, diminished demands are made upon the personal capacities and tax-bearing power of the people, as far as possible, without endangering the efficiency of the army. The empire's interest requires, especially in view of the end of the septennate, that the bill be passed with the utmost dispatch so that the new recruit calls may be made in the autumn on the new basis. With a view to enabling the Reichstag to complete the discussion of the bill the government will not, in the meantime, introduce any other measures."

Many high confederates remain convinced that the means for the new organization can be procured without overburdening the country on the basis of the present bill introduced in the last Reichstag last autumn. At the opening of the winter session a bill will be presented directed to obtaining means according to the capabilities of the taxpayers. Until then the increased costs will be covered by the federal states through matriculation in payments.

"Gentlemen, with great sacrifice Germany has been united in one empire. The nation honors most those who staked their blood and property on this work, which led us to the present position of prosperity. To the glorious achievements with which God has blessed us in our battle for independence, we owe our present position. Our duty we can only fulfill if we make ourselves strong enough to remain surely so for Europe's peace. I trust you will not fail to give me my confidence in your patriotic sacrifices and willing support in striving for these aims."

The Emperor's reference to the duty of the members of the Reichstag to preserve and guard that which the nation has won was greeted with hearty cheers. When the Emperor had concluded his written speech, long and prolonged applause greeted him. His Majesty stood waiting for quiet to be restored and when he could be heard he added, for improvement upon his saying: "Now then. The old God looks upon you and will lend you his blessing to complete this honest work for the benefit of the fatherland."

The Bavarian minister called for three cheers for the Emperor, and they were given with hearty good will. The uniformed members of the Imperial Guard, the Social-Democratic and Radical People's parties and some of the Anti-Semites were present at the ceremony of the opening of the house. Most of the members of the Center or Catholic party were present and there was a full attendance of the government groups.

Sheridan Stakes Won by Ingomar.

CHICAGO, July 4.—The Sheridan stakes, next to the Derby the most important three-year-old event of the Washington Park meeting, to-day resulted in the first real upset that the talent has received. Clifford should have been an easy winner, but Ingomar, from the Hawthorne track, won the race at the long odds of 30 to 1. Ed Corrigan's maiden colt, Tyro, at 25 to 1 in the betting, was an easy second and Clifford was hard pressed to beat Aldebaran for third place. The time, 2:10, was very slow, considering that the track was fast. Clifford's price on the boards was 3 to 5 and the ring was made rich by his defeat. Ingomar was prominent all the way, running under an easy pull. Aldebaran being the principal pace maker.

At the finish Ingomar was running easily. The race was won by 870 to the winner. The defeat of Ida Pickwick in the second race by Maid Marian was another loss to the form players.

The Kentucky Derby, which was so easily vanquished by Helen Nichols, Saturday, got off in front and the Pickwick mare could never overtake her. Maid Marian finished strong for a long time in front, while Ida Pickwick and Santa Anna were in deep distress at the last furlong pole. The time, 2:02, was a fast time for the race.
